

Embark on a Poignant Journey of Redemption and Self-Discovery with "One Chance: Sarah Frank"

Westchase Teen Author Debuts First Novel
If you're looking for a new supernatural series to read, check out local teen author Sarah Frank's first novel One Chance. BY MACK MANNING, PHOTOS BY JEFF BANGS

The book will be published by Scholastic's Teen & Young Adult division. A portion of the proceeds will be going to the local charity, The Florida State University's Center for the Study of the Holocaust and the Genocide.

One Chance is the first in a planned series of books that explore mystery, the powers and time travel. The idea for the series first came to Frank when she was still in elementary school. The novel centers around the main character, Sandy, who after her parents' divorce, finds herself in an orphanage run by two dark and mysterious sisters. Sandy meets new friends and with their help discovers a mysterious magical book that allows her to travel in time. Sandy realizes that the trick is the key to saving her parents and changing her life.

If you like Frank's first novel and want to get to the final version of her story, "One Chance" was a long time, said Frank. "I wrote the first draft in 2011, and it took me a year to finish it. I had to go back and forth a few times. I had to go back and forth a few times. I had to go back and forth a few times."

Frank is available online with and physical copies at her school website. To read the book, you'll be able to purchase a copy of One Chance online at www.Scholastic.com and other online retailers.
