The history of coffee in Japan dates back to the 16th century, when Portuguese traders introduced the beverage to the country. However, it wasn't until the 19th century that coffee shops began to appear in Japan. These early coffee shops were modeled on European cafes, and they served coffee in a Western style.

Over time, Japanese coffee shops began to develop their own unique style. They started to serve coffee in traditional Japanese teacups, and they began to offer a wider variety of coffee drinks, including cold brew and iced coffee. Today, there are many traditional Japanese tea cafes in Tokyo, where you can enjoy a cup of coffee in a relaxed and elegant setting.

Some of the most popular traditional Japanese tea cafes in Tokyo include:

- Ueshima Coffee Shop: This cafe is located in the Asakusa district, and it has been serving coffee since 1928. Ueshima Coffee Shop is known for its traditional Japanese atmosphere, and it serves a variety of coffee drinks, including cold brew and iced coffee.
- Kagurazaka Saryo: This cafe is located in the Kagurazaka district, and it has been serving coffee since 1954. Kagurazaka Saryo is known for its beautiful garden, and it serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso and cappuccino.
- Kyobashi Senbikiya: This cafe is located in the Kyobashi district, and it has been serving coffee since 1899. Kyobashi Senbikiya is known for its traditional Japanese atmosphere, and it serves a variety of coffee drinks, including cold brew and iced coffee.

In recent years, a new wave of coffee shops has emerged in Tokyo. These modern coffee shops are often more experimental than traditional Japanese tea cafes, and they offer a wider variety of coffee drinks, including single-origin coffees and pour-over coffee.

Some of the most popular modern coffee shops in Tokyo include:

- Fuglen Tokyo: This cafe is located in the Shibuya district, and it is known for its Scandinavian-inspired design and its excellent coffee. Fuglen Tokyo serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso, cappuccino, and cold brew.
- Blue Bottle Coffee: This cafe is located in the Aoyama district, and it is known for its high-quality coffee and its minimalist design. Blue Bottle Coffee serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso, cappuccino, and cold brew.
- % Arabica: This cafe is located in the Omotesando district, and it is known for its beautiful design and its excellent coffee. % Arabica serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso, cappuccino, and cold brew.

In addition to the traditional Japanese tea cafes and modern coffee shops, there are also a number of hidden gem cafes in Tokyo. These cafes are often tucked away in quiet alleys or side streets, and they offer a unique and intimate coffee experience.

Some of the most popular hidden gem cafes in Tokyo include:

- Little Nap Coffee Stand: This cafe is located in the Koenji district, and it is known for its cozy atmosphere and its excellent coffee. Little Nap Coffee Stand serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso, cappuccino, and cold brew.
- Onibus Coffee: This cafe is located in the Nakameguro district, and it is known for its industrial-chic design and its excellent coffee. Onibus

Coffee serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso, cappuccino, and cold brew.

- The Roaster: This cafe is located in the Shibuya district, and it is known for its roasting expertise and its excellent coffee. The Roaster serves a variety of coffee drinks, including espresso, cappuccino, and cold brew.

Tokyo is a city with a rich and diverse coffee culture. Whether you're looking for a traditional Japanese tea cafe, a modern coffee shop, or a hidden gem cafe, you're sure to find something to your taste in Tokyo.

This book is a guide to some of the best of these cafes, and we hope that it will help you to discover the hidden side of Tokyo's coffee scene.

Enjoy your coffee!
