Dorothy's journal, meticulously kept from 1798 to 1802, offers a day-to-day account of her experiences living alongside her brother in the heart of the Lake District. Her keen eye for detail captures the beauty of their natural surroundings, their daily routines, and the profound bond they shared. In her words, we glimpse the very essence of the Romantic movement, where nature and imagination intertwined to inspire profound artistic expression.

Dorothy Wordsworth: A Poetic Soul

Dorothy Wordsworth was a gifted writer and poet in her own right, although she chose to remain largely unpublished during her lifetime. Her journal, intended as a private record of her experiences, reveals her sharp wit, keen observations, and deep love for the natural world. Her entries are a treasure trove of vivid descriptions and poetic insights, mirroring the Romantic sensibility that so profoundly influenced her brother's work.

Through Dorothy's journal, we witness the genesis of some of William's most iconic poems. She often served as his muse, accompanying him on walks and providing him with inspiration for his verse. Her journal entries capture the same landscapes, emotions, and experiences that later found their expression in William's poetry, offering a fascinating glimpse into the creative process.

“It was a day of clouds—of driving clouds—sometimes the sun was hid and sometimes it broke out with a beautiful gleam of light. The wind blew strong over the hills and over the lake, but with all this there was no rain. The water was agitated and foamy, but carried away the reflections of the clouds most perfectly.”

Dorothy Wordsworth, Journal Entry, 17th December, 1800

Dorothy's journal also sheds light on her deep bond with her brother. She was his constant companion, providing emotional support and intellectual stimulation. Their shared experiences and mutual love of nature deepened their connection and significantly influenced their creative endeavors.

William Wordsworth: A Master of Verse

William Wordsworth is widely regarded as one of the greatest poets of the English language. His poems, infused with his profound love of nature and his belief in the power of the imagination, have captivated readers for centuries. 'Extracts From The Journal Of Dorothy Wordsworth And From The Poems Of William' provides a unique opportunity to explore the interplay between Dorothy's experiences and William's poetic creations.

This collection includes some of William's most celebrated poems, such as "Tintern Abbey," "Daffodils," and "Ode: Intimations of Immortality." By juxtaposing Dorothy's journal entries with these poetic masterpieces, readers gain a deeper understanding of the inspirations and emotions that shaped Wordsworth's verse.

Memory

A pen--to register; a key--
That winds through secret wards
Are well assigned to Memory
By allegoric Bards.

As aptly, also, might be given
A Pencil to her hand;
That, softening objects, sometimes even
Outstrips the heart's demand;

That smooths foregone distress, the lines
Of lingering care softens,
Long-vanished happiness refines,
And clothes in brighter hues;

Yet, like a tool of Fancy, works
Those Spectres to dilate
That startle Conscience, as she lurks
Within her lonely seat.

Oh! that our lives, which flee so fast,
In purity were such,
That not an image of the past
Should jar that pencil's touch!

Retirement then might hourly look
Upon a soothing scene,
Age steal to his allotted nook,
Contented and serene;

With heart as calm as lakes that sleep,
In frosty moonlight glistening;
Or mountain rivers, where they creep
Along a channel smooth and deep,
To their own far-off murmurs listening.

William Wordsworth

Dorothy's journal entry about seeing daffodils along the lake inspired William's famous poem.

In "Tintern Abbey," William reflects on the transformative power of nature, echoing the sentiments expressed in Dorothy's journal entries. "Daffodils" captures the joy and wonder they experienced during a walk together, while

"Ode: Intimations of Immortality" explores the profound emotions of loss and longing that Dorothy's journal reveals.

““And then my heart with pleasure fills, And dances with the daffodils.””

William Wordsworth, "Daffodils"
