The Articles of Confederation had proved to be ineffective in many ways. The central government was weak and had no power to tax or regulate commerce. The states were constantly arguing with each other, and there was no way to resolve disputes peacefully. As a result, the United States was on the verge of collapse.

The delegates to the Constitutional Convention were determined to create a new government that would be strong enough to maintain Free Download but also protect the rights of individuals. They debated a wide range of topics, including the structure of the government, the powers of the different branches, and the rights of citizens.

The most important topic debated at the Constitutional Convention was the structure of the government. The delegates eventually agreed to create a three-branch government, consisting of a legislative branch, an executive branch, and a judicial branch. The legislative branch would be responsible for making laws, the executive branch would be responsible for enforcing laws, and the judicial branch would be responsible for interpreting laws.

The delegates also debated the powers of the different branches of government. They agreed that the legislative branch should have the power to make laws, but that the executive branch should have the power to veto laws. They also agreed that the judicial branch should have the power to interpret laws, but that the legislative branch should have the power to override judicial decisions.

The delegates also debated the rights of citizens. They agreed that all citizens should have the right to freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and the right to bear arms. They also agreed that no one should be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.
